Webster County Historical Society and Museum

The Webster County Historical Museum began as a Carnegie library in 1911. It served the city of Marshfield as a library for 84 years until space limitations and the fact that it was not handicap accessible led to the construction of the new library in 1995.

The Webster County Historical Society worked at obtaining the building for the purpose of a Museum. They petitioned the city of Marshfield who was the owner of the building at that time to donate it to the society for a museum. It was legally determined that the city could not simply donate the building. An agreement was created that allowed this society to use the building to operate it as a museum on behalf of the city and county.

When the society gained control of the building work began in renovating the building. Through volunteers, who spent countless hours improving the building, including removal and replacement of plaster walls and ceilings, as well as removing the modern tile flooring to bring back the original wooden floor, updating electrical work, adding new steps and landing on the outside of the front of the building, and many other updates & restorations they were able to bring the building back to life.

The Museum officially opened on July 4, 1997.

In 2015, the city of Marshfield presented the buildings titled to the historical Society. It was determined that over $100,000 in donated labor, services, and materials had been invested in the building since 1997, and thus the building had essentially been paid for to the city.

Diana Barnett, Paula, Greer, and Linda Blazer have all served as Museum directors. Linda Blazer served in that row for over 20 years. Linda Dickinson now serves as Museum Director. She is supported in her duties by the Webster County Historical Society Board of Directors and a dedicated group of volunteers.

The museum is funded solely by donations. It is continuously looking for funding in various ways, including fundraisers, applying for grants, and encouraging donations. It is also in great need of more volunteers. Many of the past volunteers have passed away, or are no longer physically able to help out at the museum or resource center. Volunteers can choose the day they want to work the hours they want to work, and how often they want to work.

Hours of operation are 1:00 to 4:00 on Thursdays and Fridays, January through March and Tuesdays through Friday, April through the middle of December.

It is occasionally opened on Saturdays and Sundays and visitors may call 417-689-2098 to schedule a visit at an alternative time.
